March 3-May 24 Tales in Sprinkled Gold: Japanese Lacquer for European Collectors at the Getty Center

This exhibition presents examples of Japanese lacquer objects from the Victoria and Albert Museum in London. Made in Japan—some specifically for export to Europe—these objects were popular among wealthy European collectors from the 17th to 19th centuries. The art form has had a major impact on both the fine and decorative arts. At the heart of this exhibition is the Mazarin Chest, one of the most significant and beautiful examples of Japanese export lacquer to have survived, and a highlight from the collection of Japanese art at the Victoria and Albert Museum. Made for European patrons, the chest features scenes from Japanese literature and is decorated in a traditional Japanese lacquer technique called makie ("sprinkled picture"), in which gold or silver powder and flakes are sprinkled over successive layers of lacquer before it dries.

Fowler in Focus: Masks of Sri Lanka

Through August 30, 2009

Brightly painted wooden masks transform Sri Lankan dancers into specific characters that appear in curing rituals or popular entertainment. Ranging from comical to fierce, these unusual masks have long played an important role in performance genres that were created through the mixing of local indigenous religious traditions with strains of Buddhism and Hinduism originally imported from the Indian mainland in the first millennium BCE. The Fowler Museum collections include the most important assemblage of nineteenth and early twentieth century Sri Lankan masks in North America. Fowler in Focus: Masks of Sri Lanka presents twenty-five of these rare masks, as well as newly produced masks representing Singhaya (lion) and Mahasona (Great Graveyard Spirit) in full costume.

Developed in collaboration with David Blundell, associate professor, National Chengchi University, Taiwan and consultants in Matara, Southern Province, Sri Lanka: Conrad Ranawake, Institute for the Development of Community Strengths, and A. V. S. Ranasinghe, Sri Lanka Mask and Dance Ensemble. The accompanying programs are made possible through the Sri Lanka Foundation and the Yvonne Lenart Public Programs Fund.

On the Enlightened Path: Jain Art from India
Until July 13, 2009

The Norton Simon Museum presents On the Enlightened Path: Jain Art from India, an exhibition that examines the artistic traditions of one of the world's oldest yet least known religions, Jainism. Installed in the rotating Asian gallery on the lower level of the Museum, this exhibition includes approximately 20 sculptures, paintings and manuscripts.

Founded in India in the sixth century BC by Vardhamana Mahavira, Jainism encourages personal meditation, following a strict ethical code and practicing ahimsa, or non-violence and kindness toward every living creature. Followers, called Jains, believe in a lineage of twenty-four liberated souls known as Jinas (conqueror or liberator), who have achieved liberation from the endless chain of rebirth and serve as spiritual guides to others on the same path. The Jain community is comprised of both lay and monastic members. Monks and nuns are either Digambara, which means "sky-clad," and do not wear clothing, or Svetambara, "white-clad," and wear simple white robes. In modern-day India, the Jain community comprises roughly 10 million followers, less than one-half of one percent of the country's population.

On the Enlightened Path features a dazzling selection of traditional Jain artworks from the Norton Simon collections. In the Jain community, illustrated sacred texts such as the Kalpasutra (Book of Sacred Precepts) and sculptures depicting various Jinas are the primary focus of artistic output. The exhibition presents a fine selection of bronze, marble and schist sculptures from the 9th to the 15th centuries, used for worship in both home altars and temples. A colorful and intricate Jain tantric diagram, or Yantra, from the 15th century, rich in cosmic iconography, was used as a meditation aid. Selections of the Museum's rare, complete 16th-century Kalpasutra manuscript, recently donated by Narendra and Rita Parson, are on view for the first time. Together, these works provide visitors an opportunity to learn more about this fascinating religion, its followers, and its dynamic artistic traditions.

April 15, 2009 International Human Rights Film Series

From January to June, the UCLA International Institute will present six recent documentaries and feature films, one each month, on human rights issues that receive little attention in the United States. These films stand out for their depiction of issues on terms dictated from within the countries and cultures that they examine. Featuring commentary from filmmakers and scholars, each screening will also be an opportunity for public discussion about the issues.

All films are to be screened at the James Bridges Theater 1409 Melnitz Hall on the UCLA campus and, with one exception, on Wednesday evenings.

The UCLA Asia Institute will be presenting Paper Cannot Wrap Up Embers as a part of the film series.

Los Angeles Premiere

During the last half-century, Cambodia has witnessed genocide, decades of war and the collapse of social order. The documentary looks at an irreparable tragedy that is less visible, yet no less pervasive: the spiritual death that results when young women are forced into prostitution. The film presents stories of poor Asian women whose lives were violated and their destinies destroyed when their bodies were turned into items of sexual commerce.

Original title: Le papier ne peut pas envelopper la braise.

April 17, 2009 Mohiniyattam: Dance of the Enchantress

Friday, 7:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.

Host : Bharati Shivaji and Vijayalakshmi; Introduction by Christine Knoke, Curator, NSM

Type : Dance Performance

This Indian dance performance is devoted to the classical style known as Mohiniyattam, a feminine dance form that originated in the southern Indian state of Kerala and is widely admired for its graceful body movements. Bharati Shivaji and her daughter-disciple Vijayalakshmi are considered the leading exponents of Mohiniyattam today, and they are credited with rejuvenating this art form through innovative and path breaking choreography.

Background

Toru Takemitsu (1930—1996) is considered one of the major composers of the later 20th Century. His talents and interests were broad. He drew inspiration from a range of sources that included jazz, popular song, the European avant-garde, and traditional Japanese music. He wrote concert music and music for films, among them a number of cinematic classics. He was a figure of universal sensibilities, and the first Japanese composer to find international acclaim. He also was a popular celebrity in Japan and a well-received writer on aesthetics and musical theory in both Japanese and English. He was an advocate for world peace, and even managed to write a detective novel.

Ma: Sound and Silence

Assorted Medium Event

Experience the aesthetics of 'ma,' captured in sound and silence, form and space, and movement and rest. The Shumei Arts Council of America presents a concert of sights and sounds that embody the spirit of the great 20th Century composer, Toru Takemitsu. Featured is music by Takemitsu and Haruno Kira, a niece of Toru Takemitsu as well as the world premier of "Seihitsu?Thoughts for Takemitsu," by taiko master Koji Nakamura. The concert blends photography, Japanese traditional dance, the art of tea, calligraphy, and music, both scored and improvisational, into a discourse on one of the guiding principles of Japanese art and the art of Toru Takemitsu: 'ma.'

Among the artists are Junko Ueno Garrett on piano, Koji Nakamura on drums and flute, Yukiko Matsuyama on koto, Amy Tatum, flute, composer Haruno Kira, dancer Hidesomi Bando from Bando School, calligrapher and author Alex Kerr, and photographer Sumio Koike. Tea ceremony performed by Masanori Tamaki from Mushanokoji-senke School. Production by Kouji Sh'tara, a nephew of Toru takemitsu. Directed by Don Riedel, film producer.

IWASHIGUMO (Summer Clouds), 1958

Directed by Mikio Naruse, widely regarded as one of the giants of pre-New Wave Japanese cinema, this ensemble piece recounts the lives of a family of farmers by interweaving several different storylines. Holding these stories together is the central figure of a young war widow torn between maintaining her independence and the necessity of re-marrying. Managing a farm while raising a young son and dealing with a bossy mother-in-law, the war widow's life starts to change when a reporter comes to interview her and the two begin an affair. Iwashigumo traces change in postwar Japan from the point of view of the farming peasantry, as land reform and economic growth exacerbate the generation gap between restless youngsters and their tradition-bound elders.

Minal Hajratwala: Leaving India: My Family's Journey from Five Villages to Five Continents

THU, APR 02, 7 PM

In conversation with journalist Swati Pandey

In this groundbreaking work, Hajratwala mixes history, memoir, and reportage to explore the questions facing not only her own Indian family but that of every immigrant: Where did we come from? Why did we leave? What did we give up and gain in the process?

Ticket Price: FREE (unless otherwise specified).
