March 3-May 24 Tales in Sprinkled Gold: Japanese Lacquer for European Collectors at the Getty Center

This exhibition presents examples of Japanese lacquer objects from the Victoria and Albert Museum in London. Made in Japan—some specifically for export to Europe—these objects were popular among wealthy European collectors from the 17th to 19th centuries. The art form has had a major impact on both the fine and decorative arts. At the heart of this exhibition is the Mazarin Chest, one of the most significant and beautiful examples of Japanese export lacquer to have survived, and a highlight from the collection of Japanese art at the Victoria and Albert Museum. Made for European patrons, the chest features scenes from Japanese literature and is decorated in a traditional Japanese lacquer technique called makie ("sprinkled picture"), in which gold or silver powder and flakes are sprinkled over successive layers of lacquer before it dries.

Fowler in Focus: Masks of Sri Lanka

Through August 30, 2009

Brightly painted wooden masks transform Sri Lankan dancers into specific characters that appear in curing rituals or popular entertainment. Ranging from comical to fierce, these unusual masks have long played an important role in performance genres that were created through the mixing of local indigenous religious traditions with strains of Buddhism and Hinduism originally imported from the Indian mainland in the first millennium BCE. The Fowler Museum collections include the most important assemblage of nineteenth and early twentieth century Sri Lankan masks in North America. Fowler in Focus: Masks of Sri Lanka presents twenty-five of these rare masks, as well as newly produced masks representing Singhaya (lion) and Mahasona (Great Graveyard Spirit) in full costume.

Developed in collaboration with David Blundell, associate professor, National Chengchi University, Taiwan and consultants in Matara, Southern Province, Sri Lanka: Conrad Ranawake, Institute for the Development of Community Strengths, and A. V. S. Ranasinghe, Sri Lanka Mask and Dance Ensemble. The accompanying programs are made possible through the Sri Lanka Foundation and the Yvonne Lenart Public Programs Fund.

Treasures through Six Generations: Chinese Painting and Calligraphy from the Weng Collection

April 11, 2009–July 13, 2009

Boone Gallery

Exhibition of Chinese painting and calligraphy highlights works spanning 900 years. One of the greatest private collections of Chinese art in the nation is showcased at The Huntington in "Treasures through Six Generations: Chinese Painting and Calligraphy from the Weng Collection," on view April 11 through July 13 in the MaryLou and George Boone Gallery. Based on an exhibition organized in 2007 by the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, The Huntington's presentation will feature 41 masterworks from a collection that is revered in China as well as in the United States. This past fall, the Weng collection was the focus of an exhibition at the Beijing World Art Museum.

On the Enlightened Path: Jain Art from India

Until July 13, 2009

The Norton Simon Museum presents On the Enlightened Path: Jain Art from India, an exhibition that examines the artistic traditions of one of the world's oldest yet least known religions, Jainism. Installed in the rotating Asian gallery on the lower level of the Museum, this exhibition includes approximately 20 sculptures, paintings and manuscripts.

Founded in India in the sixth century BC by Vardhamana Mahavira, Jainism encourages personal meditation, following a strict ethical code and practicing ahimsa, or non-violence and kindness toward every living creature. Followers, called Jains, believe in a lineage of twenty-four liberated souls known as Jinas (conqueror or liberator), who have achieved liberation from the endless chain of rebirth and serve as spiritual guides to others on the same path. The Jain community is comprised of both lay and monastic members. Monks and nuns are either Digambara, which means "sky-clad," and do not wear clothing, or Svetambara, "white-clad," and wear simple white robes. In modern-day India, the Jain community comprises roughly 10 million followers, less than one-half of one percent of the country's population.

On the Enlightened Path features a dazzling selection of traditional Jain artworks from the Norton Simon collections. In the Jain community, illustrated sacred texts such as the Kalpasutra (Book of Sacred Precepts) and sculptures depicting various Jinas are the primary focus of artistic output. The exhibition presents a fine selection of bronze, marble and schist sculptures from the 9th to the 15th centuries, used for worship in both home altars and temples. A colorful and intricate Jain tantric diagram, or Yantra, from the 15th century, rich in cosmic iconography, was used as a meditation aid. Selections of the Museum's rare, complete 16th-century Kalpasutra manuscript, recently donated by Narendra and Rita Parson, are on view for the first time. Together, these works provide visitors an opportunity to learn more about this fascinating religion, its followers, and its dynamic artistic traditions.

Daughters of India: Photographs by Stephen P. Huyler
Through July 26, 2009

For a country as vast and paradoxical as India, it is impossible to generalize about the role of women in society. Worshiped as shakti, oppressed as chattel—these seeming contradictions have left many Western observers stumbling into stereotypes and misunderstanding. In Daughters of India, photographer Stephen P. Huyler celebrates the strength, courage, resourcefulness, and creativity of Indian women from a wide variety of backgrounds. Notably, artistic creativity plays an important part in the lives of many of the women, as they express themselves and address others through paintings, sculpture, embroidery, and the creation of decorative elements in their households (including kolam or rice flower drawings executed on the ground in front of their homes). For others, the full force of their creativity is brought to bear simply in overcoming the severe obstacles presented by poverty, caste prejudice, and other hardships. Taken together, these sensitive photographs form intimate portrayals of the lives, activities, and rituals of these remarkable Indian “everywomen.”

The Fowler Museum thanks Stephen P. Huyler for providing his images for Daughters of India, also featured in a new publication of the same name. The accompanying programs have been made possible by the Yvonne Lenart Public Programs Fund and Manus, the support group for the Fowler Museum.

Discovering Ganesha: Remover of Obstacles
Through September 20, 2009

Ganesha, the so-called “Elephant God,” is one of the most adored and widely worshipped deities in the Hindu pantheon. In a series of stunning photographs, New York-based artist Shana Dressler investigates contemporary Ganesha festivals in Mumbai. Juxtaposed with classical representations of Ganesha from Pacific Asia Museum's collection, Dressler's vibrant photos connect the past and the present of India while illustrating the historical legacy and spiritual significance of Ganesha in Hindu society.

May 21 Erhu Virtuoso Karen Hwa-Chee Han to Perform at The Huntington SAN MARINO, Calif.— Erhu Virtuoso Ms. Karen Hwa-Chee Han, a world-famous classical/crossover musician, will give a magical performance on an ancient Chinese, two-string bowed instrument on Thursday, May 21, 2009 at 7:00 p.m, at The Huntington Library, Art Collections, and Botanical Gardens.

Erhu (also introduced as two strings Chinese Violin) is an ancient Asian instrument, introduced to China during the Han Dynasty (Ca.140 B.C.) With its mellow and bright tone, uniquely designed with only two strings, the erhu is one of the most popular instruments in Asia for both solo and orchestral performances.

Ms. Han began her erhu studies at the age of six. She is the youngest person to earn her Master's Degree with honors from the Central Conservatory of Music in Beijing. She has performed for many visiting foreign dignitaries, including Chinese president Jiang Zemin, former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, and Luciano Pavarotti.

In 1997, as the first erhu soloist, Ms. Han collaborated with the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra. The concert was broadcast live in China/Hong Kong and was viewed by more than 1 billion people. Since then, as a soloist, Ms. Han has collaborated with Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, Paris National Orchestra, Pacific Symphony Orchestra, Columbus Symphony, New West Symphony and many other world leading orchestras, jazz bands throughout Canada, England, France, Germany, Japan and the United States.

In both China, France and the United States, Ms. Han performed as erhu soloist on soundtrack music for more than 100 movies and TV series, including the Oscar-winning movie: The Last Emperor, The Joy Luck Club, The Passion of the Christ, Anna and the King, Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End, We Were Soldiers, Mulan 2, Pursuit of Happyness, Memoirs of a Geisha. In 2002, Ms. Han was featured in "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon" Erhu Concerto World Premiere with Pacific Symphony Orchestra (composed/conducted by Oscar Original Score Winner Tan Dun). Most recently Ms. Han's unique erhu performances were featured in the movie: Star Trek and The Hurt Locker, which will be showing soon to the public.

In addition to her performance, Ms. Han will give a brief presentation on the background of the Erhu and its historical significance in Chinese music. An ensemble of musicians will also be invited to play on stage, each presenting an unique Chinese instrument. Ticket includes admission to the Huntington exhibition "Treasures through Six Generations" between 5:30 pm and 6:45 pm, prior to the performance. Light refreshments will follow the performance and participants will have a chance to meet the performing artists.

Tickets (open seating): $25 for Huntington Members, $35 for Non-Members

TOYO'S CAMERA - Japanese American History during WWII (2009) at 2pm

IWASHIGUMO (Summer Clouds), 1958 4PM

Directed by Mikio Naruse, widely regarded as one of the giants of pre-New Wave Japanese cinema, this ensemble piece recounts the lives of a family of farmers by interweaving several different storylines. Holding these stories together is the central figure of a young war widow torn between maintaining her independence and the necessity of re-marrying. Managing a farm while raising a young son and dealing with a bossy mother-in-law, the war widow's life starts to change when a reporter comes to interview her and the two begin an affair. Iwashigumo traces change in postwar Japan from the point of view of the farming peasantry, as land reform and economic growth exacerbate the generation gap between restless youngsters and their tradition-bound elders.

Defending the universe for the last half a century: A triple screening of our favorite robots Astro Boy, Gigantor and Voltron!

Astro Boy: © Tezuka Production / Mushi Production; Gigantor: © Entercolor Technologies Corp; Voltron: © World Events Productions, Ltd.

ASTRO BOY (1963)

The mother Japanese animation, Astro Boy was the first anime series to be broadcast on TV in Japan. The story follows the adventures of a heroic robot named Astro Boy which originated from the manga of the same name, created by legendary Tezuka Osamu.

GIGANTOR (1964)

Set in the "future" year of 2000, Gigantor is the story of a young boy named Jimmy Sparks who lives with his uncle Dr. Bob Brilliant on a remote island. With the help of a huge remote controlled robot named Gigantor, Jimmy fights crime around the world.

Gigantor is the American adaptation of the Japanese anime and manga series Tetsujin 28-go by Mitsuteru Yokoyama.

VOLTRON: DEFENDER OF THE UNIVERSE (1984)

A team of five young pilots command five robot lions, which when combined form Voltron. In this undefined future era, the Voltron Force was in charge of protecting the planet Arus (ruled by Princess Allura) from the evil King Zarkon (from planet Doom), his son Lotor, and the witch Haggar, who would create huge Robeasts to terrorize the people of Arus.

Description: The Japanese American Cultural & Community Center's (JACCC) 26th Annual Children's Day Celebration is a one day festival, where kids rule, families have a blast and people can engross themselves in cultural activities, cuisine, arts and entertainment around Japanese culture.

"Children's Day" kicks off with the Chibi-K: Kids Fun Run, where children ages 4 to 12 run down San Pedro Street. The streets are then cleared to make way for the Little Tokyo Recreation Center's San Tai San / 3 on 3 Youth Basketball Tournament. Teams of boys and girls aged 7-12 years old bring it to the streets of Little Tokyo to play 3-on-3 basketball. Registration for the Chibi-K and San-Tai-San events are required.

On the JACCC Plaza the annual Asian Pacific Arts & Crafts Faire presents a host of vendors offering traditional handmade Asian Pacific craft items, food, children's games, crafts, health and community information booths, and a wide representation of Pan-Asian performances on the main stage.

Sign-up for Cultural Discovery Workshops being offered throughout the day from 11am – 3pm. This year workshops are being offered in taiko drumming by UCLA's Kyodo Taiko Group, manju making with Little Tokyo's Manju Master Brian Kito of Fugetsu-Do Confectionary and sushi making with Sushi Chef Institute's founder Chef Andy Matsuda. Pre-registration is recommended but not required. Space is limited and will be filled on a first come first serve basis.
