SECRETS OF THE SILK ROAD

MARCH 27 - JULY 25, 2010

Strikingly well-preserved mummies tall in stature and fair in complexion have lain in the parched Tarim Basin of western China for 3,800 years. Wearing Western-influenced textiles and possessing surprising technologies and customs, just who these extraordinary people were is a mystery! This historic exhibition of 150 objects drawn from the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region Museum and the Xinjiang Institute of Archaeology in Urumqi, China reveals surprising details about the people who lived along the ancient Silk Road. For the first time ever, three of the more than 100 Caucasian mummies found and preserved in the western China's inhospitable desert sands are being presented in the United States. An impressive array of objects are included in the exhibition to represent the full extent of the Silk Road, where lavish goods, technologies and ideas between East and West were adopted and exchanged.

Angel Island: The Centennial Exhibition
June 18, 2010 - November 14, 2010

Angel Island is an immigration station off the coast of San Francisco that was open from 1910-1940 to process immigrants coming from the Pacific Rim countries. Dubbed the “Ellis Island of the West,” more than one million immigrants from over 80 countries – including 175,000 Chinese – were processed at Angel Island during its years of operations. Many of these detainees were Chinese, who faced intense interrogation and subsequent detention for weeks, months and sometimes even years. The ordeal of this experience left an indelible mark in the lives of Chinese immigrants at Angel Island that forever changed the course of America’s history.

Recently, President Barack Obama issued a proclamation declaring January 21, 2010 as “National Angel Island Day” and an excerpt from the proclamation reads: “Many arrived at Angel Island, weary but hopeful, only to be unjustly confined for months or, in some cases, years. As we remember their struggle, we honor all who have been drawn to America by dreams of limitless opportunity.”

To commemorate the 100th Anniversary of Angel Island, CAM, in partnership with Angel Island Immigration Station Foundation, is proud to open an exhibition to honor the history, legacy and unforgettable stories of Angel Island. The exhibit will occupy 400 sq. ft of space and will showcase historic photographs, a reproduction of a poem carved on the barracks of Angel Island, artifacts and a multi-media station featuring personal stories of those who endured or were profoundly affected by the Angel Island experience.

Hollywood Chinese: The Arthur Dong Collection Exhibition / October 23, 2009 – May 31, 2010

Hollywood Chinese: The Arthur Dong Documentary Collection presents selections from over 800 pieces of movie memorabilia that was collected during the ten-year research for Arthur Dong’s groundbreaking film, Hollywood Chinese. Through posters, lobby cards, film stills, and scripts and documents dating from 1912, visitors journey into a vivid and graphic study of how Chinese have been imagined in the movies, reflecting the social and cultural history of the Chinese in America during the last century. In addition to iconic depictions evidenced by material from films such as The Good Earth, The Vengeance of Fu Manchu, Charlie Chan in Honolulu, and Flower Drum Song, highlights of the collection include the surviving archive of pioneer Chinese American filmmaker James B. Leong, who produced the 1921 film, Lotus Blossom, in Los Angeles.

Filmmaker Arthur Dong is the Guest Curator for this exhibition.

Indian Miniature Painting

February 24 – May 16, 2010

In the Focus Gallery

As a companion exhibition to Beyond the Page: Contemporary Pakistani Art, the museum will display a range of classical miniature painting from its collection to connect visitors to this centuries-old artistic tradition in South Asia. The exhibition will focus on three genres in miniatures, Power, Pantheon and Portraiture, depicting images of rulers, deities and individuals. The conversation between these classical examples and the contemporary manifestations in Beyond the Page will engender a more complete understanding of the continuum between tradition and contemporary culture.

Curated by Bridget Bray.

Beyond the Page: The Miniature as Attitude in Contemporary Art from Pakistan

February 18, 2010 – June 27, 2010

In the Changing Exhibition Galleries

The past two decades have witnessed a vibrant revival of miniature painting, a genre developed at Islamic courts in South, Central and West Asia between the 14th and 19th centuries. In recent years, artists have reinvented the traditional practice, negotiating a fine balance between historical practices and conceptual concerns. Collectively, their innovations have resulted in the "new miniature" movement – the subject of this exhibition.

Beyond the Page exhibits the work of thirteen contemporary artists who engage the miniature as practice and concept. Roughly half of the artists in the exhibition trained in traditional miniature painting at the National College of Arts in Lahore, Pakistan, and assimilate new imagery and materials. The remaining artists, though not trained in miniature painting, explore the concept of the miniature in such diverse forms as photography, textile, sculpture and installation. As these artists emigrate, travel and exhibit internationally, the "new miniature" movement has become a global phenomenon that demonstrates the vitality of contemporary Pakistani art and, more specifically, how aspects of "tradition" are essential parts of contemporary culture.

The exhibition will be on view from February 18 until June 27, 2010, and features fifty works by thirteen artists. The exhibition is guest curated by Hammad Nasar with Anna Sloan and Bridget Bray and organized by Green Cardamom and Pacific Asia Museum.

Intertwined: Bamboo & Stem

Saturday, 04.24.10 - Sunday, 05.09.10

Awarded the Cotsen Bamboo Prize in 2000, Kenichi Nagakura is an internationally recognized contemporary bamboo master and artist. Passionate about jazz, classical, and rock music, he strives to elicit the "rhythm and harmony" of bamboo. His organic sculptural baskets are rooted in tradition but reflect a wide range of influences including Pop Art and Jomon ceramics from Japan's pre-historic period.

Complimenting Nagakura's baskets will be floral arrangements by members of the Ikenobo, Los Angeles Chapter and Ohara School of Ikebana, Los Angeles Chapter.

April 28, "Joymoti" film screening

A film screening of Joymoti, the first Assamese feature film with discussion by Professor Aparna Sharma, Department of World Arts and Cultures.

Wednesday, 6:00 PM - 8:00 PM

Kaufman Room 101

Los Angeles, CA 90095

'Joymoti' is considered by many film historians as the first Assamese feature film. The film was lost for many years after its release in 1935. A few years back, filmmaker, historian and critic Altaf Mazid found some reels and undertook restoration of the film. This screening presents this restored version. Joymoti was made by prominent Assamese cultural nationalist, Jyotiprasad Aggarwala and focuses on the 17th century Assamese princess, Joymoti who lost her life in order to secure the future of the Assamese kingdom that was in throes of turmoil.

The film was shot entirely in Assam and is striking in its use of outdoor locations and set design that uses principles of vernacular architecture and folk material culture. Joymoti arose in the context of regional cinema and is distinct in its mode of production and aesthetic from the popular mythological films at that time being developed in the Mumbai film studios. It inaugurated Assamese cinema and offered a powerful alternative focussing on a woman figure as opposed to the popular mythological films of that time that largely centered on male figures.

The screening will be accompanied by a talk by Professor Aparna Sharma discussing the historical relevance of 'Joymoti.' Audience is advised the version of the film being screened does not include all reels of the film and its full soundtrack.

About the speaker:

Professor Aparna Sharma is a filmmaker and film theorist. Her research is practice-based and focuses on issues surrounding the representation of cultures. Professor Sharma makes films on communities displaced within the mainstream national imagination of India such as the Indian diaspora and the widows of Vrindavan. Recently she has commenced a new documentary project examining the cultural landscapes and folklore of India's north-eastern state, Assam. At the Department of World Arts and Cultures, she teaches video production combining practical training with specific theoretical inputs.

The Center for India and South Asia presents our 2010 Annual Lecture

Engendering Technology:
Machines as the Measure of Men (and Women)
in Early 20th-Century India

Reception to follow seminar

Abstract:

By the mid-20th century a wide range of modern machines were in daily use in India, including many (like bicycles, sewing machines, rice-mills and typewriters) that were of foreign origin. How were these everyday technologies, many of which first found use among Europeans, incorporated into the social and economic life of India? How did they change work regimes and transform or accentuate established gender roles? Michael Adas has argued for the importance of 'machines as the measure of men' in changing European perceptions of Asia, but how did machines inform Indian self-perceptions and understandings of race and gender in an age of growing urbanization, industrialization and nationalism? This illustrated lecture will reflect on the role of everyday technology in the shaping of Indian modernity and explore contending views of the gendered significance of the machine in daily life.

About the Speaker:

David Arnold is Professor of Asian and Global History at the University of Warwick in the UK. Formerly Professor of South Asian History at the School of Oriental and African Studies in London, he is a Fellow of the British Academy and of the Royal Asiatic Society. His current research, funded by the Economic and Social Research Council in the UK, focuses on 'everyday technology' in India between 1880 and 1960. A founder member of the Subaltern Studies collective, and a contributor to several of the Subaltern Studies volumes, David Arnold's work has ranged widely over the political and social history of India from the late 18th to the mid-20th centuries. He has published extensively on medical history, including Colonizing the Body: State Medicine and Epidemic Disease in Nineteenth-Century India (University of California Press, 1993), on environmental history (The Problem of Nature: Environment, Culture and European Expansion, Blackwell, 1996), on Science, Medicine and Technology in Colonial India for the New Cambridge History of India in 2000, and on botany and travel: The Tropics and the Traveling Gaze: India, Landscape, and Science, 1800-1856 (University of Washington Press, 2006). His study of Gandhi for the Longman 'Profiles in Power' series was published in 2001. He has recently revised for publication a second edition of Burton Stein's History of India (2010) and written a History of South Asia to be published in German by Fischer in 2011.

UCLA Advance Screening: "Climate Refugees"

Join us and the UCLA community for an advance screening of "Climate Refugees," a documentary film about "the human face of climate change." This screening is sponsored by the UCLA Burkle Center, the UCLA Institute of the Environment, and the UCLA School of Theater, Film and Television.

Friday, May 14, 2010

7:00 PM - 9:30 PM

James Bridges Theater

Los Angeles, CA 90095

About the Movie: If global warming is our planet's most pressing issue, large-scale population displacement is the human consequence. Massive continental migration is already under way, and diminished natural resources continue to threaten the lives of millions. The quickly submerging islands of Tuvalu in the South Pacific, drought-affected regions of Sudan, storm-susceptible coastlines of Bangladesh, and rapidly expanding deserts in China are forcing millions to relocate beyond their borders. Who will accept these refugees, and how will they impact their adopted homeland? Filmmaker Michael Nash spent two years traversing the globe, visiting these and other hot spots where rising sea levels are threatening millions of people's survival. Strong visuals and potent testimony from the victims of climate change, politicians, scientists, relief organizations, and authors help sound the alarm for instituting new policies and working together to create solutions to cope with this imminent crisis. Climate Refugees fervently captures the human fallout of climate change. Learn more about the film at www.climaterefugees.com/. (Official Selection, Sundance, 2010)

"an achingly beautiful meditation on loneliness and longing in the city." Maggie Lee,

VILLAGE VOICE

"Nozomi's journey of discovery, whether she's being submissive to her "owner" or learning what it means to love, is especially piercing because it can't possibly end happily. A deceptively airy film, Air Doll makes us reflect on our sexual assumptions and the depths of loneliness often endured by the inhabitants of large cities." -Laura Kern,

The Painter Farrukh Beg: A Traveler in Mughal India

The Los Angeles County Museum of Art presents its Fourth Annual Lecture by distinguished guest Dr. Milo Cleveland Beach.

Thursday, April 08, 2010

7:30 PM - 9:00 PM

LACMA

Brown Auditorium

5905 Wilshire Blvd.

Los Angeles, CA 90036

The Fourth Annual Distinguished Lecture on South and Southeast Asian Art presents Milo Cleveland Beach, former director of the Smithsonian's Freer and Sackler Galleries. In this lecture Dr. Beach examines the great painter Farrukh Beg. After emigrating from Iran in the late sixteenth century, he worked at four different royal courts in India, changing his manner of painting each time to match the tastes of a new patron. His most important but least known works were placed in the Gulshan Album, a volume assembled by the early 17th-century Mughal emperor Jahangir. Now in the Golestan Library, Tehran, these illustrations — the focus of this talk — are among the finest surviving Mughal paintings, and help define the personality of a restless, uniquely independent master artist.

About the Speaker:

Dr. Beach is a renowned scholar of South Asian painting and author of numerous books and articles, including The Silk Road and Beyond: Travel, Trade, and Transformation (2007) and Rajasthani Painters: Bagta and Chokha, Master Artists at Devgarh (2005).

April 11 Japanese Hospital: Caring for the Pre-War Nikkei Community

2PM

For the early Issei immigrants, access to medical care was limited. Five Issei doctors sued the State of California after being denied papers of incorporation to build a hospital. The case, Jordan vs. Tashiro, was finally won in the U.S. Supreme Court in 1928. Japanese Hospital was opened in Boyle Heights in 1929.

Dr. Troy Kaji will present the history of the historic case and the establishment of the Japanese Hospital. Clips from recent interviews sharing stories about the pre-war community hospitals will be shown.

This program is co-sponsored by the Little Tokyo Historical Society and the Japanese American National Museum. It is part of a series presented by Discover Nikkei, a project of the Japanese American National Museum made possible through the generous support of The Nippon Foundation.
