Exhibition - Japanese Character Series by Shizuko Greenblatt - at Pacific Asia Museum, May 6 - June 27

The Pacific Asia Museum presents "Japanese Character Series by Shizuko Greenblatt" at its Gallery of Contemporary Art from May 6 through June 27.

In this exhibition, Shizuko Greenblatt explores a new mode of calligraphy on canvas as well as a fresh approach to ikebana.

Greenblatt presents Japanese characters in an abstract expressionistic style while retaining the basic structure of each character.

As a result, the character or image alludes to its original meaning, but at the same time her spontaneous brushstrokes blur its legibility.

The artist's exploration of formality continues through the Fusion Ikebana series as she challenges the meaning of ikebana, or the Japanese art of flower arrangement, in terms of aesthetics and materiality.

Her Japanese paintings were inspired by her family members who were calligraphers of an ancient samurai family in Northern Japan.

She explores Japanese characters utilizing western modes of contemporary expressionistic style with mixed media.

The characters chosen for this series have positive and inspiring messages such as "Passion for Life", "Perseverance" and "Hope".

Her Fusion Ikebana are focused on sculptural forms which explore modernist paintings, formal sculpture explorations and ikebana in a contemporary expressionistic style.

Greenblatt uses organic material (trees, branches, stumps) and manmade items (acrylic sheets, rods, tubes and wire).

In order to convey intangible themes such as "Enthusiasm" and "Strength" as well as esthetic beauty, she modifies the elements by painting both natural and manmade items, transforming them into an integrated whole which suggests both natural and spiritual themes.

Greenblatt attempts to activate and uplift the human soul through all the materials and elements of her art and Japanese characters as well as traditional symbolism.

Shizuko Greenblatt was born in Japan to an ancient samurai family and raised in an environment which emphasized and honored arts. After graduating from Aoyama Gakuin University in Tokyo, she came to the U.S. and continued her education at UCLA. Later she became a certified interior designer the State of California and worked in the field for 23 years. She studied art and the spirit of art with noted late artist Vicki Dolnick for ten years, whom she counts as a mentor.

Greenblatt is active in art organizations such as the Los Angeles Art Association/Gallery 825 and the San Diego Art Institute.

She is an instructor of Sogetsu School of Japanese flower arrangement. She currently resides and works in Los Angeles.

"Japanese Character Series by Shizuko Greenblatt" is curated by Yeonsoo Chee.

SECRETS OF THE SILK ROAD

MARCH 27 - JULY 25, 2010

Strikingly well-preserved mummies tall in stature and fair in complexion have lain in the parched Tarim Basin of western China for 3,800 years. Wearing Western-influenced textiles and possessing surprising technologies and customs, just who these extraordinary people were is a mystery! This historic exhibition of 150 objects drawn from the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region Museum and the Xinjiang Institute of Archaeology in Urumqi, China reveals surprising details about the people who lived along the ancient Silk Road. For the first time ever, three of the more than 100 Caucasian mummies found and preserved in the western China's inhospitable desert sands are being presented in the United States. An impressive array of objects are included in the exhibition to represent the full extent of the Silk Road, where lavish goods, technologies and ideas between East and West were adopted and exchanged.

Angel Island: The Centennial Exhibition

June 18, 2010 - November 14, 2010

Angel Island is an immigration station off the coast of San Francisco that was open from 1910-1940 to process immigrants coming from the Pacific Rim countries. Dubbed the “Ellis Island of the West,” more than one million immigrants from over 80 countries – including 175,000 Chinese – were processed at Angel Island during its years of operations. Many of these detainees were Chinese, who faced intense interrogation and subsequent detention for weeks, months and sometimes even years. The ordeal of this experience left an indelible mark in the lives of Chinese immigrants at Angel Island that forever changed the course of America’s history.

Recently, President Barack Obama issued a proclamation declaring January 21, 2010 as “National Angel Island Day” and an excerpt from the proclamation reads: “Many arrived at Angel Island, weary but hopeful, only to be unjustly confined for months or, in some cases, years. As we remember their struggle, we honor all who have been drawn to America by dreams of limitless opportunity.”

To commemorate the 100th Anniversary of Angel Island, CAM, in partnership with Angel Island Immigration Station Foundation, is proud to open an exhibition to honor the history, legacy and unforgettable stories of Angel Island. The exhibit will occupy 400 sq. ft of space and will showcase historic photographs, a reproduction of a poem carved on the barracks of Angel Island, artifacts and a multi-media station featuring personal stories of those who endured or were profoundly affected by the Angel Island experience.

Hollywood Chinese: The Arthur Dong Collection Exhibition / October 23, 2009 – May 31, 2010

Hollywood Chinese: The Arthur Dong Documentary Collection presents selections from over 800 pieces of movie memorabilia that was collected during the ten-year research for Arthur Dong's groundbreaking film, Hollywood Chinese. Through posters, lobby cards, film stills, and scripts and documents dating from 1912, visitors journey into a vivid and graphic study of how Chinese have been imagined in the movies, reflecting the social and cultural history of the Chinese in America during the last century.

In addition to iconic depictions evidenced by material from films such as The Good Earth, The Vengeance of Fu Manchu, Charlie Chan in Honolulu, and Flower Drum Song, highlights of the collection include the surviving archive of pioneer Chinese American filmmaker James B. Leong, who produced the 1921 film, Lotus Blossom, in Los Angeles.

Filmmaker Arthur Dong is the Guest Curator for this exhibition.

Sunday April 25, 1:00 -3:00 pm

Japanese American Cultural and Community Center, Garden Room

$20 General Admission, $15 JACCC Members, $18 Seniors/Students

World-renowned bamboo sculptor Kenichi Nagakura of Tokyo will feature his expressive and unique artwork at Intertwined: Bamboo and Stem Contemporary Art Exhibition, opening on Saturday, April 24 at the George J. Doizaki Gallery in Little Tokyo, Downtown Los Angeles.

This exhibit will showcase twenty-eight of Nagakura's finest early and current work, and is part of the 30th Anniversary Celebration at the Japanese American Cultural and Community Center--a preeminent presenter of Japanese, Japanese American, and Asian American arts in the U.S.

Nagakura blends passion and innovation with each sliver of bamboo he plaits into some of the most imaginative art pieces today. Nagakura learned traditional bamboo basketry from his grandfather and worked diligently to master the traditional techniques before breaking away to pursue his innovative style.

A recipient of the Cotsen Bamboo Prize in 2000, Nagakura continually strives to elicit the "rhythm and harmony" of the bamboo. His organic sculptural vessels are rooted in tradition but reflect a wide range of influences including Pop Art, the Jomon ceramics from Japan's pre-historic period, and cord-patterned clay work from the 3rd and 2nd millennia B.C.

Intertwined: Bamboo and Stem is a collaborative exhibition featuring a gallery design by JACCC's Artistic Director Hirokazu Kosaka. The exhibition will also feature the Japanese floral arrangements of Ikenobo, Los Angeles Chapter and Ohara School of Ikebana, Los Angeles Chapter.

Complimenting the exhibition, Nagakura and Kosaka will give a lecture and demonstration as part of the JACCC's On the Veranda Cultural Program on Sunday, April 25 from 1-3 p.m. This insightful program will give audience members a deeper understanding of bamboo art and the collaborative process between the artists.

Intertwined: Bamboo & Stem exhibit and Bamboo Forest lecture/demonstration are made possible in part by the generous support from the Tai Gallery/Textile Arts, Inc. in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Indian Miniature Painting

February 24 – May 16, 2010

In the Focus Gallery

As a companion exhibition to Beyond the Page: Contemporary Pakistani Art, the museum will display a range of classical miniature painting from its collection to connect visitors to this centuries-old artistic tradition in South Asia. The exhibition will focus on three genres in miniatures, Power, Pantheon and Portraiture, depicting images of rulers, deities and individuals. The conversation between these classical examples and the contemporary manifestations in Beyond the Page will engender a more complete understanding of the continuum between tradition and contemporary culture.

Beyond the Page: The Miniature as Attitude in Contemporary Art from Pakistan

February 18, 2010 – June 27, 2010

In the Changing Exhibition Galleries

The past two decades have witnessed a vibrant revival of miniature painting, a genre developed at Islamic courts in South, Central and West Asia between the 14th and 19th centuries. In recent years, artists have reinvented the traditional practice, negotiating a fine balance between historical practices and conceptual concerns. Collectively, their innovations have resulted in the "new miniature" movement – the subject of this exhibition.

Beyond the Page exhibits the work of thirteen contemporary artists who engage the miniature as practice and concept. Roughly half of the artists in the exhibition trained in traditional miniature painting at the National College of Arts in Lahore, Pakistan, and assimilate new imagery and materials. The remaining artists, though not trained in miniature painting, explore the concept of the miniature in such diverse forms as photography, textile, sculpture and installation. As these artists emigrate, travel and exhibit internationally, the "new miniature" movement has become a global phenomenon that demonstrates the vitality of contemporary Pakistani art and, more specifically, how aspects of "tradition" are essential parts of contemporary culture.

The exhibition will be on view from February 18 until June 27, 2010, and features fifty works by thirteen artists. The exhibition is guest curated by Hammad Nasar with Anna Sloan and Bridget Bray and organized by Green Cardamom and Pacific Asia Museum.

About the Movie: If global warming is our planet's most pressing issue, large-scale population displacement is the human consequence. Massive continental migration is already under way, and diminished natural resources continue to threaten the lives of millions. The quickly submerging islands of Tuvalu in the South Pacific, drought-affected regions of Sudan, storm-susceptible coastlines of Bangladesh, and rapidly expanding deserts in China are forcing millions to relocate beyond their borders. Who will accept these refugees, and how will they impact their adopted homeland? Filmmaker Michael Nash spent two years traversing the globe, visiting these and other hot spots where rising sea levels are threatening millions of people's survival. Strong visuals and potent testimony from the victims of climate change, politicians, scientists, relief organizations, and authors help sound the alarm for instituting new policies and working together to create solutions to cope with this imminent crisis. Climate Refugees fervently captures the human fallout of climate change. Learn more about the film at www.climaterefugees.com/. (Official Selection, Sundance, 2010)

Los Angeles,

A bitter young man who is paralysed from the waist down after an accident has been appointed a new nurse. Their relationship is cool, to put it mildly, and his authoritarian father, who seldom shows his face, also is not a model of warmth and understanding. In long, neutral scenes separated by hard cuts, the contours emerge of a restrained psychological drama in which the young man's cynicism slowly makes way for a renewed, cautious attempt to explore life. Then the film unexpectedly drops all its reserves and explodes in a hallucinogenic ode to the universe that, like people, has to go through a cycle of birth and death. The editing frees itself from the fixed course of time. Can you live in an eternal present, without past and future?

Los Angeles,

SAYC is a day long event which aims to provide South Asian high school youth with an opportunity to discuss pertinent social and community issues with their peers, college students, and alumni. The event is also a chance to expose high school students to accomplished faculty and alumni who may share their relevant experiences and research. The theme of this years conference is identity, specifically "living in the hyphen."

The program will include a number of identity based workshops and discussions as well as small group mentoring sessions meant to encourage exploration of self and community. While we hope students enjoy their day with us on campus, they should leave with a better understanding of self as well as how they may participate and contribute to their communities – South Asian or not.

May 30 Picture Brides

Dr. Michiko Midge Ayukawa will shed light on the lives and histories of picture brides— Issei women who came to America to marry husbands they knew only from photographs — and how they affected the community.

Michiko Midge Ayukawa was born in Vancouver, B.C. During World War II, she was incarcerated for four years at Lemon Creek, in the Slocan Valley, Canada. Her family resettled in Hamilton, Ontario. After obtaining her BSc and MSc at McMaster University, she worked at the National Research Council in Ottawa. Later she taught undergraduate Chemistry laboratory classes at Carleton University and the University of Victoria. In the mid-80s, she began to study history and obtained a Doctorate in 1997 at the University of Victoria. Ayukawa has written a number of articles on Japanese Canadians, in particular, Japanese picture brides. She has co-authored with Audrey Kobayashi "The Japanese Canadians" in Akemi Kikumura-Yano, ed., Encyclopedia of Japanese Descendants in the Americas, Altimira Press, 2002 and is also co-author with Patricia Roy of "The Japanese," in Paul Robert Margosi, ed., The Encyclopedia of Canada's Peoples, University of Toronto Press, 1999. A book based on her dissertation, Hiroshima Immigrants in Canada, 1891-1941 was published in November 2007 by UBC Press.

This program was made possible by the generous support of the UCLA Paul I. & Hisako Terasaki Center for Japanese Studies

Return to Daxinzhuang: Current Excavations at the Shang Colony in Eastern China

A talk by FANG HUI (Shandong University)

Friday, May 07, 2010

4:00 PM - 6:00 PM

Fowler Museum A222

UCLA

Los Angeles,

The Daxinzhuang site is one of the most important Shang settlements in eastern China from around 1300-1000 B.C. The rapid emergence of this town provided the first indication of a Shang population intrusion into the coastal region of Shandong. Recent excavations have produced a rich body of archaeological material from the diverse social and religious life at the Shang settlement. The site boasts one of the very few discoveries of Shang oracle bone inscriptions outside of the Late Shang capital Anyang and major finds of early Shang bronzes. Drawing from the most up-to-date archaeological discoveries, this talk on the on-going excavation offers important insight into the nature of Shang expansion and social structure on the eastern frontier of the Shang polity.

Fang Hui is professor of archaeology, the director of the Shandong University Museum, and Dean of Humanities, Shandong University. He specializes in Bronze Age archaeology of the Shandong region and is the director of excavation at the Daxinzhuang site.

CISA Annual Lecture 2010 with Professor David Arnold

The Center for India and South Asia presents Professor David Arnold, from the University of Warwick, as our 2010 guest speaker.

Monday, May 10, 2010

5:30 PM - 7:30 PM

Public Affairs Building

Room 2355

Los Angeles, CA 90095

The Center for India and South Asia presents our 2010 Annual Lecture

Engendering Technology:

Machines as the Measure of Men (and Women)

in Early 20th-Century India

Reception to follow seminar

Abstract:

By the mid-20th century a wide range of modern machines were in daily use in India, including many (like bicycles, sewing machines, rice-mills and typewriters) that were of foreign origin. How were these everyday technologies, many of which first found use among Europeans, incorporated into the social and economic life of India? How did they change work regimes and transform or accentuate established gender roles? Michael Adas has argued for the importance of 'machines as the measure of men' in changing European perceptions of Asia, but how did machines inform Indian self-perceptions and understandings of race and gender in an age of growing urbanization, industrialization and nationalism? This illustrated lecture will reflect on the role of everyday technology in the shaping of Indian modernity and explore contending views of the gendered significance of the machine in daily life.

About the Speaker:

David Arnold is Professor of Asian and Global History at the University of Warwick in the UK. Formerly Professor of South Asian History at the School of Oriental and African Studies in London, he is a Fellow of the British Academy and of the Royal Asiatic Society. His current research, funded by the Economic and Social Research Council in the UK, focuses on 'everyday technology' in India between 1880 and 1960. A founder member of the Subaltern Studies collective, and a contributor to several of the Subaltern Studies volumes, David Arnold's work has ranged widely over the political and social history of India from the late 18th to the mid-20th centuries. He has published extensively on medical history, including Colonizing the Body: State Medicine and Epidemic Disease in Nineteenth-Century India (University of California Press, 1993), on environmental history (The Problem of Nature: Environment, Culture and European Expansion, Blackwell, 1996), on Science, Medicine and Technology in Colonial India for the New Cambridge History of India in 2000, and on botany and travel: The Tropics and the Traveling Gaze: India, Landscape, and Science, 1800-1856 (University of Washington Press, 2006). His study of Gandhi for the Longman 'Profiles in Power' series was published in 2001. He has recently revised for publication a second edition of Burton Stein's History of India (2010) and written a History of South Asia to be published in German by Fischer in 2011.
