Remembering Angel Island

July 16, 2010 - May 29, 2011 Angel Island is an immigration station off the coast of San Francisco that was open from 1910-1940 to process immigrants coming from the Pacific Rim countries. Dubbed the "Ellis Island of the West," more than one million immigrants from over 80 countries – including 175,000 Chinese – were processed at Angel Island during its years of operations. Many of these detainees were Chinese, who faced intense interrogation and subsequent detention for weeks, months and sometimes even years. The ordeal of this experience left an indelible mark in the lives of Chinese immigrants at Angel Island that forever changed the course of America’s history. Recently, President Barack Obama issued a proclamation declaring January 21, 2010 as “National Angel Island Day” and an excerpt from the proclamation reads: “Many arrived at Angel Island, weary but hopeful, only to be unjustly confined for months or, in some cases, years. As we remember their struggle, we honor all who have been drawn to America by dreams of limitless opportunity.” To commemorate the 100th Anniversary of Angel Island, CAM, in partnership with Angel Island Immigration Station Foundation, is proud to open an exhibition to honor the history, legacy and unforgettable stories of Angel Island. The exhibit will occupy 400 sq.

ft of space and will showcase historic photographs, a reproduction of a poem carved on the barracks of Angel Island, artifacts and a multi-media station featuring personal stories of those who endured or were profoundly affected by the Angel Island experience.

Photography from the New China

December 7, 2010–April 24, 2011 at the Getty Center

The J. Paul Getty Museum recently acquired photographs by some of the young artists emerging from the reinvented society that is present-day China. This exhibition is built around those acquisitions and loans from private collections.

During the Cold War era following World War II, China was a closed society. The Cultural Revolution (1966–76) sought to destroy the artistic and intellectual heritage of centuries of imperial rule. Mao Zedong, the founder and longtime leader of the People's Republic of China, died in 1976. By 1980 his successor, Deng Xiaoping, had begun to pull back the curtain. However, China was still largely rural and poor, the Communist Party was omnipotent, censorship was severe, and artists remained under suspicion. The fall of the Soviet Union in 1989 and the uprising in Beijing's Tiananmen Square the same year caused further, more radical, change. Deng Xiaoping called for a new period of Reform and Opening.

In the past 20 years, China's economy has made huge strides to become the second largest in the world. The rapid transition has meant great progress in the way art is taught, made, and talked about in China's flourishing urban centers. Artists who went abroad to find freedom of expression have returned to establish studios and provide mentoring. In an effort perhaps to quiet rebellion and encourage tourism, the ever watchful state now furnishes space, such as the former factory that is now the arts complex 798 in Beijing.

Felice Beato: A Photographer on the Eastern Road

12/7/2010 10:00 AM-4/24/2011 5:00 PM

J. Paul Getty Museum

Series Name:

Felice Beato (British, born Venice, 1832-1909) had a long and varied photography career, and of his contemporaries, covered one of the widest geographical areas—from the Middle East to Southeast Asia. Establishing premier photographic studios in Yokohama, Japan, and Mandalay, Burma, he produced topographical and architectural views, portraits and studies of local life intended for Western audiences. A pioneer of war photography, he covered the Crimean War in 1856 and documented the aftermath of the Indian Mutiny in 1858 as well as chronicling the Second Opium War in China in 1860 and the American forces in Korea in 1871. The Museum's 2007 acquisition of more than 800 Beato photographs is the impetus and foundation for this exhibition—the first devoted to his oeuvre—represented through a selection of about 130 works.

In the Service of The Buddha: Tibetan Furniture from the Hayward Family Collection
March 27, 2010–April 3, 2011 Tibetan furniture was primarily made for use in Buddhist monasteries and households. Typically painted with brilliant mineral pigments, it is often further adorned with rich gilding and designs made of applied gesso. Organized by LACMA and curated by Stephen Markel, South and Southeast Asian art, this exhibition features selections from the Hayward Family Collection, the premier assemblage of Tibetan furniture in the United States. Distinguished by its quality and depth, the collection includes masterpieces of virtually every important type of Tibetan furniture. March 19-April 3 Pyo Gallery, LA, located at 1100 South Hope Street, Suite 105, Los Angeles, CA 90015, presents Yoshio Ikezaki's exhibition of washi sculptures, "The Poetry Of Paper: The Earth Breathes - Mind Landscape."

In this solo exhibition, Ikezaki draws inspiration from landscapes and traditional sumi ink paintings to create meditative sculptures.

Handmade Japanese mulberry paper, sumi ink, Japanese watercolors, and Nikawa glue are infused with chi energy to activate the crevices with a luminance often seen in sumi paintings.

Every mark is fully charged with meaning and stripped of unnecessary details. The end results are lyrical surfaces that celebrate the essence of nature, spirit, and mind.

The exhibition will run March 19 - April 23, 2011. A reception will be held at the gallery on Saturday, March 19 from 6 - 9 pm. In addition, the gallery will host a lecture and demonstration by the artist on April 2 at 11 am.

Yoshio Ikezaki is internationally known both as an artist and as a teacher. His approach toward making art embraces Eastern and Western philosophies and the transformative power of materials.

He earned a BA and MFA from Florida State University and then returned to Japan to train with papermaking masters Shigemi and Shigeyuki Matsuo.

Currently, Ikezaki teaches papermaking, brush painting, Japanese aesthetics, and philosophy at several universities which include: Art Center College of Design, Otis College of Art & Design, Southern California Institute of Architecture, Tama Art University, and Musashino Art University in Tokyo.

Additionally, he has lectured at Cooper Union, Pratt Art Institute and the Parsons School of Design in New York.

Ikezaki's work has been included in exhibitions throughout the U.S. and abroad, where it has received numerous awards which include the Holland Paper Biennial in 2004.

Yoshio Ikezaki spends his time divided between Los Angeles and Kitakyushu, in southern Japan. This marks the first time he has exhibited with Pyo Gallery, LA.

Pyo Gallery, LA, is located at 1100 South Hope Street, Suite 105 in Los Angeles and is open Tuesday - Saturday from 10 am. - 6 pm and by special appointment. (213) 405-1488.

In 2008, the gallery opened in the South Park sector of Downtown Los Angeles to establish a cultural link between Asia and the US.

For 30 years, Pyo Gallery in Seoul has earned a reputation as a pioneer in contemporary art and has built a loyal collector base for its roster of artists.

The gallery exhibits the work of local and international contemporary artists.

Ghazal: Kayhan Kalhor, Shujaat Husain Khan & Samir Chatterjee

Ghazal: Kayhan Kalhor, Shujaat Husain Khan & Sandeep Das is presented by UCLA Live, one of "the most unique presenters of performing arts in the country."

Thursday, April 21, 2011

8:00 PM - 11:00 PM

Royce Hall, UCLA

"In a stunning marriage of Indian and Iranian classical music, sitar virtuoso Shujaat Husain Khan, son of the legendary Ustad Vilayat Khan and Kayhan Kalhor, master of the kamancheh (the traditional fiddle of Persian classical music) present an evening of inspired improvisation. The duo performs together for the first time in seven years and are accompanied by traditional tabla percussion from Samir Chatterjee. The name Ghazal reflects the artists' inherent cultural link: in the Persian tradition, a ghazal is a genre of poetry, characterized by a blend of ecstatic spirituality and earthly desires. In India, ghazal has evolved into a form of semi-classical popular music and usually takes the form of a love ballad."

April 9 Lost & Found: Reclaiming the Japanese American Incarceration 2PM

In November of 1994, the Japanese American National Museum opened its second major exhibition, America's Concentration Camps: Remembering the Japanese American Experience to both critical and popular acclaim. The exhibition utilized innovative inter-active displays of the 11 government-run camps, installed a fragment of an original barracks building used to hold Japanese Americans and encouraged former inmates to express their feelings, some for the first time since World War II.

Curator Karen Ishizuka will discuss the collaborative development of this landmark exhibition and read from her book, Lost & Found: Reclaiming the Japanese American Incarceration.

Sogetsu Ikebana 25th Anniversary in L.A. to feature demonstration by its grand master,
April 9, 1:30PM Anniversary luncheon and Ikebana live demo at Omni Hotel Los Angeles on April 9

The Los Angeles Branch of the Sogetsu School of Ikebana marks its 25th anniversary this spring. As part of the anniversary celebration, a special Ikebana demonstration by Tetsunori Kawana, the Grand Master of the Sogetsu school, is planned and the public is invited to attend this show. <http://kawanaworld.com>

Mr. Tetsunori Kawana, the Grand Master of the Sogetsu School

The demonstration and luncheon by Sogetsu's Los Angeles Branch will be held at the Omni Hotel Los Angeles, 251 South Olive Street, Los Angeles, CA 90012, (213) 617-3300, on Saturday, April 9, at 11:30 am. General admission is $80.

Registration will start at 10:30 am, and the demonstration will take place from 1:30 - 3:00 pm. Master Kawana will create a spectacular stage-size flower arrangement in front of the audience.

For reservations, contact Sogetsu Ikebana Los Angeles Branch, c/o Tom Takeichi Associates, 1721 West Garvey Ave, #G, Alhambra, CA 91803, (626) 588-2660, Fax (626) 588-2659, attention Ms. Haruko Takeichi.

Sogetsu is one of several Ikebana flower arranging schools founded in Japan, but now followed by practitioners throughout the world. The Sogetsu School was established by the late headmaster Sofu Teshigahara (1900-1979) in 1927.

Believing that Ikebana should be both enjoyable and creative, Sofu developed a school of Ikebana that was deeply rooted in Japanese tradition yet embraced the evolving requirements of the modern age.

Established in 1953, the Sogetsu Foundation promotes various activities to research and disseminate teaching in the practice of Ikebana internationally.

Located in Akasaka, Tokyo, the headquarters oversees the foundation's 49 branches in Japan, and over 100 overseas branches and study groups in 34 countries.

Branches and study groups regularly hold workshops, demonstrations, and exhibitions to enhance local cultural activities. Notable artists who have been collaborators at the school include Sam Francis, Shusaku Arakawa and Isamu Noguchi.

The current headmaster, Akane Teshigahara, is the fourth generation in a succession of family members to lead the school. Her beautiful, bold and delicate works have been shown in exhibitions worldwide. Her captivating demonstrations are highly regarded by connoisseurs and laypeople alike, in Japan and abroad.

Film "Takamine" depicting the behind scene story of planning cherry trees by the Potomac in 1912, April 10, 1:00 PM & 6:00 PM The year of 2012 will mark the 100th anniversary of the original planting of the cherry trees by the Potomac River in Washington, D.C. in 1912.

The planting the cherry trees was officially the present from the Tokyo Mayor Yukio Ozaki to Mrs. Taft, wife of the U.S. President.

But the driving forces of this goodwill movement was Japan-born Jokichi Takamine, successful chemist and businessman in New York City in early 20th century .

Film "Takamine" depicts the life of Takamine and the story of meeting Mrs. Eliza Rushamah Scidmore who had been fascinated by the beauty of cherry blossom trees in Japan.
