OPENING FILM

West Coast Premiere 2014

Director: Wang Xiaoshuai

Producer: Liu Xuan

Screenwriter: Wang Xiaoshuai, Fang Lei, Li Fei

Cinematographer: Wu Di

Production Designer: Lou Pan

Editor: Yang Hongyu

Sound: Fu Kang

Composer: Umeit

Cast: Lv Zhong, Shi Liu, Feng Yuanzheng, Qin Hao, Amanda Qin

HDCAM / DCP, color, in Mandarin w/ English s/t, 110 min.

In Beijing, a stubborn widow, Deng (Lv Zhong, in a splendid performance), receives anonymous phone calls, and strange things keep happening to her. Her two sons, no less puzzled, try to solve the mystery. Yet, to arrive at the core, layers and layers of repressed memories need to be peeled away, a trip to a forgotten town to be taken. In his best film of late, celebrated Sixth Generation director Wang Xiaoshuai forcefully addresses the "red amnesia" that is haunting China. – Bérénice Reynaud

In person: Wang Xiaoshuai, Liu Xuan

Tribute to Wu Tianming (吴天明)

Los Angeles, CA

TRIBUTE TO WU TIANMING (吴天明)

1986

Director: Wu Tianming

Screenwriter: Zheng Yi

Cinematographer: Chen Wancai, Zhang Yimou

Production Designer: Yang Gang

Composer: Xu Youfu

Cast: Zhang Yimou, Lv Liping, Liang Yujin, Xie Yan, Niu Xingli

HDCam, color, in Mandarin w/ English s/t, 130 min.

In China's mountainous interior region, a village struggles to find and maintain a water supply. Shooting against stunning highland backdrops, director Wu Tianming brings an almost ethnographic attention to the villagers for whom the dangerous, sometimes deadly endeavor has become a collective obsession. Woven into the story are the romantic entanglements of a prominent well-digger played by Wu protégé Zhang Yimou, soon to be internationally acclaimed for Red Sorghum (1987). – Paul Malcolm

In person:

Robert Rosen (Dean Emeritus, UCLA School of Theater, Film and Television))

Janet Wu Yanyan (daughter of the late Wu Tianming)

October 25, 2014 Fowler OutSpoken: Geoffrey Robinson and Jill Forshee: Perspectives on Timor-Leste

Saturday, 2:00 PM - 3:30 PM

Fowler Museum

UCLA Campus

Los Angeles, CA 90095

The island of Timor is divided into an independent sovereign state of Timor-Leste and West Timor, which is part of Indonesia. Timor-Leste's complex history includes a period of Indonesian occupation from 1975 to 1999. In this two part program, UCLA professor of history Geoffrey Robinson discusses the recent political history of Timor-Leste and its efforts to achieve justice and reconciliation since independence. Following Robinson's talk, independent scholar and contributor to the Textiles of Timor exhibition catalogue Jill Forshee delves into the political stories of the Timorese weavers' experiences during the occupation and into current times—highlighting their textiles as personal registers of life histories. The program is introduced by the Fowler Museum's senior curator of Asian and Pacific collections and Textiles of Timor exhibition co-curator Roy Hamilton.

This weekend (give or take a little)

Friday, October 10, 2014 7:30pm

David Henry Hwang Theater

East West Players

120 N Judge John Aiso Street

Los Angeles, CA 90012

Kunitoshi Kineya, a one-of-a-kind Nagauta shamisen player, will come to three U.S. cities in October to perform. Nagauta, which literally means "long song" in Japanese, is a classical style of Japanese music which traditionally accompanies Kabuki Theater.

Kunitoshi specializes in performing pieces from the Nagauta repertoire on the shamisen, a three-stringed fretless lute.

His concert will consist of two parts: the first will be a shamisen demonstration in which he will explain the significance of Nagauta music. The second part will be a reduced performance of a classic kabuki play titled "Kurozuka", which Kunitoshi will narrate, sing, and play on the shamisen all by himself. An interpreter will be present and subtitles in English will be provided. His playing and thoughtful explanations about this ancient musical tradition are sure to excite and astound audiences.
